Cancer Centers of North Carolina Hosts An Evening with Kevin Cropp, Author of “The TimeKeeper”

Raleigh, N.C., April 24, 2007 – Cancer Centers of North Carolina will host Kevin Cropp, author of “The TimeKeeper” on Wednesday, May 2, 2007, at its Cancer Center located at 4101 Macon Pond Road in Raleigh.

An Evening with Kevin Cropp will provide an opportunity for healthcare professionals in the Triangle to hear about the author’s personal experience of losing his mother to breast cancer. In his book, Kevin honestly explores his dysfunctional relationship with his mother and how once they know she is dying, re-establishing a close relationship between mother and son takes priority.

“Our physicians and staff are delighted to host Mr. Cropp for this special event. His story is powerful and well-told. We are fortunate to have him share his message with us,” said Elizabeth Abernathy, Patient Support Services Administrator at Cancer Centers of North Carolina, and event coordinator.

The event will be held from 6:00 p.m. until 8:00 p.m. on May 2nd at Cancer Centers of North Carolina, 4101 Macon Pond Road in Raleigh. Attendance is by invitation only. Media coverage is welcome with prior notification.
